“ When I came to pay my respects to you yesterday at your home I was sitting beside you and I was watching your children and realizing what a wonderful job you did raising them they have become fine adults now raising their children. I then came to realize how it seemed it wasn't so long ago our children were a little bit older than that when we met, you sold us our loveable Bummer. I then thought how when you would come over and you would always be laughing about something, even if I was angry about something you always managed to get me laughing. You were always an honest man and always a true friend to our family I know we will meet again and you are at peace. My prayers are for you and your family. see you.
