“ *I found this poem while going through dad's things.
It reminded me of the picture the minister painted of gram taking dad's hand and leading him into the next part...*

*Mother's just an older little playmate who'll befriend me,
Yesteryear she traveled in the path that's mine to-day:
Never need I fear a foe from which she might defend me,
Faithful little pal, who ran ahead, and learned the way.*

“ I will miss Elsie not being in the world. We shared many wonderful memories, and it's still HER recipes I automatically turn to. I hope she realized how much she meant to me and I wish we could have gone on forever as mother and ""daughter."" May angels guide her to her dear ""Butchie"" and may they both rest in peace. ""Those who walk the earth are but few compared to the tribe who slumber in its bosom"".
