“ Frank and all the extended Warner Family,

Many decades ago the Coyes and Warners were neighbors for a while. In a diary my father kept in 1934 he wrote of the doings of each day which included Jan 1:his father going to the city with Mr. Warner, Jan 10: fixing the brake on Mr. Warner's car, Jan 24:helping Mr. Warner haul wood with a team of horses, Feb. 6: Warner's have a baby boy, April 10: Mr. Warner fixing a Coye wagon and so on. Mr. Warner built our house and big garage, too. My father would often fondly recollect things like this. Your mother was quite a woman from what I see written about her. May her good memories serve you well through this sad time.

Jane was feisty and brave. She was hard working. She always said what she thought. She didn't smile an awful lot but when she did you felt it. She was the first one to volunteer to wash dishes at every church function and never complained when it was hard for her to stand so long. When there was work to be done she was always there. Even if she didn't feel like it. Even if. She was true to herself and to all her friends and family. She was a genuinely good person. I will miss her. I already do. She was proud of you Frank. Remember that always. So sorry for your loss.

“ When she use to work at McDonald's she kept everyone in check with her stern loving way. She use to tell people all the time to shut up and get to work... Even the boss. Lol. I loved her so much and will miss her greatly.

“ Mom was a badass single mother before it seemingly was the hip thing. She raised me without accepting handouts, but through hard work to provide for Granny, Grandad and myself. She made me the person I am, and I am damn proud to be Jane Warner's son. I hope I made her proud
